Re: Use of laptops/tablets during MCLE seminars

It has come to the attention of the MCLE Office that an increasing number of MCLE participants are using laptops/tablets during lectures of MCLE activities, either playing games, surfing the internet, doing pleadings, etc.

Please inform the participants before the start of the MCLE educational activities that laptops and tablets should not be used during the lectures. This is in consonance with the purpose of the MCLE to maintain the ethics of the profession. Professional decorum dictates that participants in MCLE education activities should devote full attention and extend due respect to the lecturer.

For your information and guidance.
